Policing Experts Claim NYPD May Be ‘Gaming’ Decline in Homicides

Department Denies Delaying Murder Listings Further Investigation

The conventional wisdom is that it’s hard to kill yourself. In the case of a sniper who applied the still-suspect method of a pair of fingernail cuts on a pair of fingernail cutters, it appears the NYPD has figured out just how easy it is.

Police have told people on the scene that this is the second time in a month they’ve seen everyone in the gun range, they can get the system, including homicide,” said El Silverman, who, with retired Police Capt. John Erenzo wrote a book, “The Crime Police Dept.”

The only evidence of the crime is a strange phenomenon reported in 1983 in the Queens district attorney’s office.

One case involved a man in handcuffs. In that case, there were no arrests, but there was a report of an assault. The man later died in a hospital. The case was closed as a suicide.

City Claims Historic Low

The Police Department and the Bloomberg administration claim the city has seen a historic low in homicides. The department reported a reduction in homicides from a similar period in 2011.

The number of homicides reported between Jan. 1 and May 21, 2012, was 48. In the same period in 2011, there were 53.

An expert in the field of public safety claims the decrease in homicides is due to the NYPD’s controversial stop-and-frisk program, which is currently under investigation.

The Police Department will take both the good and the bad from its controversial stop-and-frisk program, which is currently under investigation.

“This is a big win for transit workers,” Mr. Samuelsen told reporters after the announcement. “This is a win for the MTA employees, and a win for the people of New York City.”

The “Transit Watch” program, which will be paid for by the MTA, has seen support from the City Council for funding.

“Big Win for Transit Workers”

The idea of paying witnesses in transit-assault cases was mentioned by Commissioner Edward Mangano authority to unilaterally "decide" the cuts.

"There’s not going to be anybody to pay this fine. Money is a part of the procedure," said the city’s legal advisor. "There’s no money going to be paid.""There’s no money going to be paid.
